

“Experimenting with amateur radio, and, particularly, with radiowave propagation, as a teen helped lead me to a career as a geophysicist, Antarctic and Arctic scientist, astronaut, and professor. Almost every claim I might make to a technical achievement in over 45 years as a scientist and engineer has had linkages to experiences within amateur radio. My objective for the talk is to entertain you with several stories that illustrate these linkages.”